

In this scenario we have the request coming in and being handled by the client side router. Here is where we decide if we need to send a request to our server/handle invalid calls to the DB or if our request is to the client side controller. The client side controller handles/changes to the views if the received requests were handled properly.